After nearly one year of preparation, the first issue of the journal is finally published! Congratulations to the editorial board members, to the paper authors, to the paper reviewers and to the staff members!

Neuromedicine is an important branch of medicine. It deals with the treatment of neural disorders that are common among developed and developing countries. The aim of this journal is to provide a platform to academicians and practitioners from multiple disciplines to share their latest research results on neuromedicine and related neurosciences, such as neuro-pathology, neuro-radiology, neuro-ophthalmology and neuro-physiology.

Like all the other journals of the Isaac Scientific Publishing, this journal will follow the open access policy and will be peer reviewed. All the manuscripts are subject to a strict review process by experts in this field, and every manuscript accepted for publication undergoes careful typesetting and proofreading. We are proud to say that every paper of the journal has been seriously treated! Now these papers are available on the website for free download.

We want to express our sincere appreciation to the editorial board members, especially to our Editor-in-Chief, Prof. Dr. BuLang Gao, from Shanghai Jiao Tong University! Your great effort guarantees the correct direction of the journal and the quality of every paper.

We also appreciate the efforts from all the peer reviewers. We rely upon the commitment, expertise and judgement of our reviewers to maintain the high standard of our papers. Our success is impossible without the help of the reviewers.

We are also grateful to the authors who trusted us and submitted their manuscripts to this newly created journal. We will continue to work hard and smart, and cooperate with you to create a high standard, successful neuromedicine journal.
